A masterpiece

By Mark D. Schnittman

I purchased this book to learn the details of quality home construction. I do not plan on building a home myself, but I am interested in how my home is constructed. This book is extremely well-written, and explains the entire process from digging the hole for the foundation to interior trim. Sticky points are discussed, as are tricks for speed, efficiency, and build quality. Quite simply, this is nothing short of a home construction encyclopedia. Armed with tools, ingenuity, and a good strong back, one could use this book as a primary reference for home construction. Highly recommended.

An Art Job

By Eudoro Lopez

I found this title outstanding.

After reading my fathers copy of Mr Blackburn's "Illustrated Basic Carpentry" (1976), my first search and purchase at Amazon in September 1998 (Amazon only sold books at that time! ) included this book.

I was completely satisfied, it included actual topics like the basement construction, Electrical Wiring details I didn't expect to find. This was a finding because his first book I read was completely traditional carpentry and now he was treating "modern" subjects.

Still, tips and stories on American traditional house building are nicely treated with tales like Mason trick to ensure payment after their job was done.

Beautifully hand illustrated by the author, with clear explanations as in "Illustrated Basic Carpentry", there is also a nice reproduction on carpentry I didn't expect just at the beginning of the carpentry section, a 1548 representation.

Recently I had the chance to show this particular book to an experienced American architect who conducts restoration mostly on public buildings in USA and his word were the title of this comment: An Art Job.

After this nice encounter I also bought " Traditional Woodworking Hand tools", Furniture by Design" and Year -round house care" by this same author, Mr Graham Blackburn.

Actually I'm expecting the delivery of his "The Illustrated Encyclopedia of Ships, Boats, Vessels and Other Water-Borne Craft" which after reading it, and finding it includes what I expect to, I am sure I will choose to be an excellent gift for my cousin-in-law Harriet, who's actually studying to become a US Naval Officer.

I hope you enjoy your purchase and Amazon as much as I have!

Sincerely,

Eudoro.

Best of its kind

By Alexander Tarnas

This is a particular kind of book. For those building rough wood homes and finish carpentry, only Aldren Watson's books come close, and Blackburn's illustrations here are simple and delightful. The Dover architecture reprints and Lloyd Kahn's work belong in the same collection. But again this is for those of a peculiar mind and aesthetic, with old wood on the brain. Not for learning modern construction techniques, and definitely not for learning passive solar construction.
